BICYCLE RIDER, 10, IS STRUCK BY CAR

New York City Motorists Arrested After Kensington Collision

Three Salem youths were among eight persons injured in district traffic accidents over the weekend, according to Salem state highway patrol reports.

The state's traffic toll for the weekend stood at nine today, following the death of four persons in one Toledo crash.

Kathryn Bahmiller, 16, of 442 Sharp ave., a Senior at Salem High school, and Clarence Milliken, 18, of R. D. 3, Salem, were injured when Milliken's automobile crashed into an embankment near the Pennsylvania railroad overhead on Route 62, about a mile east of Alliance, at Saturday morning early.

Girl Seriously Hurt

Miss Bahmiller suffered a fractured jaw, severe face lacerations, a cut tongue and a head injury, according to the Alliance City hospital where her condition is described as fairly good. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bahmiller, Sharp ave.

Milliken received a fractured right knee cap and body lacerations and bruises. He, too, is in the Alliance hospital.

According to the patrol, Milliken's car was traveling north on a road leading from Homeworth and crashed into the bank at the junction of Route 62 when Milliken's car failed to stop for the main traffic.

A bicycle-automobile mishap on the Goshen road, a half-mile north of Salem, at 4:45 p. m. yesterday, brought injuries to William Sechler, 0, of 668 E. Third st.

The lad, state highway patrolmen said, was riding his "bike" and turned in front of an automobile driven by Miss Jane Hilton, 25, of D. I. Salem. Taken to the Central Clinic, he was found to have suffered lacerations and contusions.

New Yorker Arrested

Joseph Sabauer, 70, of Kensington, and three passengers in his car, were cut and bruised when Sabauer's machine was struck by another machine at the junction of Routes 9 and 30, at Kensington, at 1 a. m. Sunday, the patrol reported.

Demetrius Macaronides, 32, of New York City, the other driver, was charged by the patrol with reckless driving. Records showed that he had been convicted four times on driving charges in his home state.

Elizabeth Sabauer, aged 15, Margaret Sabauer, 11, escaped with cuts and bruises. Theodore Tolls, 47, of New York City, a passenger in the other car, received cuts about one arm.

JOHNSON IS FIRST TO FILE PETITION

R. R. Johnson, Salem justice of the peace and former mayor, today became the first to officially declare his political candidacy for the August primary election when he filed his mayoralty petition with the county board of elections at East Liverpool.

Johnson, a Republican, is unopposed to date for the August 12 balloting. He was elected to the office for the first time in the fall of 1913, serving two consecutive terms.

Although the names of several citizens have been mentioned lately as mayor and council candidates, none but Johnson has filed. C. E. Donahue, former safety director, is considering running as a Republican mayoralty candidate.

C. F. Zimmerman, veteran first ward councilman, is circulating his petition to become a Republican candidate for president of council, a post now held by Charles Cornwall.

At 2:15, a program will be given in keeping with the occasion. The organist and choir will be composed of members of 40 years ago and longer. The ushers will also be former members of long ago.

John W. Tozier of Youngstown, a former member, has charge of a program. All former members and friends are invited to attend. Arrangements are being made to take care of the largest crowd that ever assembled in the church.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The Civil Aeronautics board has reported that a plane crash near Darrowsville, O., last June 14 killing Edward Falor and Terry Burgess was caused by a stall at low altitude while simulating emergency landings. The board said pilot Michael J. Gould was killed last June 3 near Mentor because he bailed out of his ship too low during a prolonged spin and power dive. The wreckage of neither ship showed structural or control failure, the report added.

COLUMBIANA MAN DIES IN PLANE CRASH

Clayton L. Kamery, 26, Is Victim Of Accident Near San Diego

WAS GRADUATE OF FAIRFIELD HIGH

James Criswell, Army Aviator Killed In Ohio. Was Known Here

A Columbiana man and a Pittsburgh air corps lieutenant, who had relatives and friends here, were dead today as the result of airplane accidents in two sections of the country.

The victims were Clayton L. Kamery, 26, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Kamery of 402 W. Park ave., Columbiana, who was killed Sunday afternoon when his plane crashed at La Mesa, Calif., near San Diego, and Lieut. James Criswell, of Pittsburgh, nephew of Mrs. Orpha B. Moore of 1099 Buckeye ave., Salem. Lieut. Criswell died along with four fellow officers in an army plane crash in central Ohio Friday night.

Criswell, who won his wings only three weeks ago, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Homer Criswell, Overbrook, Pittsburgh.

Private Plane Crashes

Clayton Kamery died when the private plane he was flying plunged to the ground, according to word received by the parents from another brother, Robert. The ship caught fire after the crash and Clayton's body was badly burned, it was learned.

The plane was owned by Robert, but Clayton had taken it up alone. The brothers went to California two years ago to enter an aviation training school at Glendale. Later they had been employed at an airplane factory.

Clayton was born at Canton Aug. 3, 1914. He was graduated from Fairfield Centralized High school. The family previously lived at Olean, N. Y. The father is employed here by the Ohio Edison Co.

Surviving are his parents; his brother, Robert, of California, another brother, Edward; a sister, Marguerite, at home, and a grandmother, Mrs. Carrie Wetherby of Olean, N. Y.

The body is being returned to Columbiana for funeral service and burial. Arrangements have not been completed.

Funeral rites, likewise, have not been completed for Lieut. Criswell.

Probe Army Accident

Army investigators, according to a report from Dayton today, expect to submit to the war department their report on the army plane crash fatal to the five men during the rain and windstorm in central Ohio Friday night.

Lieut. Criswell was one of 20 from a class of 200 selected for advanced training as an instructor, and was flying with the other men in a twin-motored navigation type of ship from Barksdale field, Shreveport, La., to Cleveland. He was engaged to marry Miss Maxine Ellington of Charlottesville, Va.

8,000 Attend America Day Rally; New Citizens Speak

LISBON, May 19.—Ideal weather prevailed for a crowd of approximately 8,000 persons, who attended the first annual observance of "I Am An American" day with a patriotic program held at the Columbiana county fairgrounds here Sunday afternoon.

The ceremonies were truly inspiring as eight high school bands in bright, colorful uniforms paraded in the warm afternoon sun, headed by the Stars and Stripes and the flags of the various Legion posts and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The village, bedecked with flags, took on a holiday air early as the crowds began to gather shortly after the noon hour, and the streets were lined with visitors as the parade moved from the high school building on W. Lincoln way to the fairgrounds at 2 p. m. Headed by the colors and the color-guard, Legionnaires, Veterans of Foreign Wars and ladies of the Legion auxiliary marched to the snappy military airs of the Lisbon, New Waterford, Salem, Wellsville, Letonia, Salineville, East Liverpool and East Palestine high school bands.

Massed Bands Play

The program opened with the assembly by the Lisbon High school band, followed by a selection, "Military Escort" by the massed bands seated in the ring in front of the grandstand and directed by Prof. Arthur Wise, director of the Lisbon band. This was followed by the advancement of the massed colors, with "To the Colors" by the massed bands.

Rev. Fr. J. L. Bardon, of St. John's Catholic church Summitville, gave the invocation, and Glenn C. Tefft, commander of the Columbiana county council of the American Legion, in a short speech reaffirmed the proclamation of "I Am An American" day and welcomed all new citizens and visitors assembled for the occasion.

Common Pleas Judge Joel H. Sharp was then introduced as master of ceremonies, and following the playing of "God Bless America" by the massed bands, with the crowd being led in song by Clerk of Courts John W. Coleman, spokesmen for naturalized citizens were introduced by G. Porter Aiken supervisor of WPA adult education in Columbiana county.

BRITISH TAKE DUKE OF AOSTA, 7,000 TROOPS

40-Day Amba Alaji Siege Ends As Italian Forces Yield

SYRIAN AIRPORTS BOMBED BY R. A. F.

Zig-Zag Battle Around Salum In North Africa Continues

(By Associated Press)
Italy's viceroy of Ethiopia, the Duke of Aosta, surrendered with his troops today after a grueling 40-day siege at Amba Alaji; and on other fronts, the British reported smashing at the Axis on both sides of the Suez canal.

RAF warplanes were said to have renewed assaults on Nazi Luftwaffe bombers at airbases in French-ruled Syria—despite a declaration by the French high commissioner that Syria's armies would strike back.

French Fire on British

French anti-aircraft batteries opened fire on the British planes when the bombed Rayak airbase, it was reported, but no hits were scored. Other RAF attacks centered on air fields at Damascus and Palmyra, Syria.

An RAF communiqué told also of British bombers heavily strafing Axis motor transport and tanks in the Fort Capuzzo and Halafaya "Hell-Fire" pass sectors in Libya.

Fascist reports said the Duke of Aosta fought to the last cartridge before capitulating at Amba Alaji.

7,000 Soldiers Surrendered

British headquarters said that 7,000 Italian soldiers were surrendering today and that the duke, son of a cousin of King Vittorio Emanuele, would surrender at noon tomorrow.

Previous British reports said there were 7,000 Italian troops and 28,000 to 31,000 natives besieged in the 40-day battle for the Ethiopian fortress.

In North Africa, the British declared that two Axis columns which crossed the Egyptian frontier in the zig-zag battle around Salum had been driven back into Libya by British mechanized forces.

In the Middle East war theater, Britain's struggle was further complicated when General Henri Dentz, high commissioner of French-ruled Syria and Lebanon, called on the Syrians to resist "criminal aggressions" of the British.

"Once again.... England sheds French blood," he said, referring to RAF attacks on Syrian airbases.

The British declared when the attacks were opened last week that German planes flying to aid Iraq were landing at Syrian air fields enroute to Iraq.

While affirming that France's chief of state, Philippe Pétain, "has no aggressive intentions against England or her empire," General Dentz said he had orders "to defend the sky and land" of the Levant states, and that "the army of the Levant is ready to oppose force with force."

Reports from Beirut said citizens of the United States, Britain and Palestine had been advised to leave Lebanon immediately.

With France taking an increasingly active role in the war, the Germany has agreed to return approximately 100,000 French prisoners of war as one of the first results of French-German negotiations.

BUT THE FACTS REMAINED

Baffled by false scents and reluctantly convinced it is impossible to arrive at any conclusions, a speculative public now seems ready to pass up the Hess incident. Plainly, neither source of information—British or German—is reliable. Both are at war, both are concealing more than they are revealing.

At the close of a week of frantic and sometimes diverting speculation, the salient facts of the war remained.

Germany successfully is spreading the war into the near east. With planes and manpower to spare, it is preparing to drive toward Suez simultaneously with a corresponding drive in Africa. Before many more days there may be fighting at Armageddon, in northern Palestine, where the final battle between good and evil will be fought on Judgment day at some future date. Germany dares to blockade the Red sea.

Germany successfully is closing down on Great Britain in the Mediterranean. Its orders bringing France to heel will have serious effect as they are carried out. A drive on Gibraltar is still in prospect. The British naval position in the Mediterranean is growing increasingly desperate in all respects. Its prestige in a part of the world where prestige means everything is being progressively undermined.

Germany is continuing to meet with great success in the battle of the Atlantic—how great only the censors may know. But Britain admits it must have more help to maintain its supply lines, and Washington officials conceded the situation is desperate by continuing to prepare the American people for the ultimate fact of convoy service, or its equivalent in patrol service.

On the principal front, facing the United Kingdom across the English channel and the North sea, Germany stands ready to make the climactic effort of the war—invasion. Experts concede a 40 percent chance of success. Failure probably would be at the expense of Britain's own exhaustion, moreover. Those who fondly imagined that Rudolf Hess had changed anything by an airplane ride can return now to the sobering realization that the only possibility of change lies in the productive capacity of the United States. Until the arsenal of democracy, as President Roosevelt calls them, are replenished, the totalitarian bloc will continue to hold the advantage.

PRO AND CONVOY

The convoy issue must reach a climax soon. Everybody who matters seems to have come to some conclusion, except President Roosevelt. The President seems to be waiting for the people to make up their minds. A lot of the people seem to be waiting for the President to make up his mind. Here are the main points of the issue:

Some of the aid the United States is giving to Great Britain is ending up on the bottom of the ocean. It may be more or less than the pro and anti spokesmen say.

In either case, it seems probable that it would become less than it actually is if the United States committed itself to an aggressive policy of ship protection, either convoy or something else.

But if the United States undertook to protect ships it would be committing an act of war. Its navy would be operating in war zones. There would be shooting, and shooting would be belligerency.

However, the United States already is protecting ships. Its "neutrality patrol" is essentially the same thing as an out-and-out convoy, with the exception that it operates outside war zones.

The patrol, nevertheless, is a halfway measure, and halfway measure, and halfway measures are not going to win a war against totalitarian opposition. The United States wants Britain to win the war, which means the British must win the battle of the Atlantic.

But until the United States makes up its mind to go into the war by the front door it shouldn't let itself be dragged in by the back door; i. e., by convoys. The effect on morale would be bad. Congress could charge that the country had been taken into war by presidential order, whereas only congress has the power to declare war.

The fact remains that this is an era of undeclared wars, and many think the United States has been at war ever since it transferred 50 destroyers to Great Britain. Certainly the lease-lend act was not a contribution to neutrality. Besides, Hitler chooses his own time.

There is a vital difference, nevertheless, between fighting an undeclared war, in which resistance is passive, and fighting a declared war, in which blood is shed. Hitler does not want to fight the United States, so why put him into a corner?

Quite right, Hitler does not want to fight the United States—now. He wants to dispose of Great Britain first, then gradually encircle and undermine the United States. He wants the United States to stay out of the war.

That is entirely a supposition. It jumps at the conclusion that Germany and the United States must fight. That is a bridge that shouldn't be crossed till it is reached. After all, Europe has been having one of these wars every generation.

Yes, and there used to be a plague every so often, too. The United States can't have its cake and eat it too. If it doesn't like the way things are, it will have to make some sacrifices to improve them.

But Germany can't invade the United States across 3,000 miles of ocean. The interventionists are seeing things under the bed.

Quite the contrary, the interventionists are refusing to see rainbows where nothing but war clouds appear. They know that Germany can—and is—forcing Great Britain backward without invasion. They believe that a triumphant Germany could bottle up the United States in the same way. They don't want to take any chances. They don't believe the world can exist half slave and half free any more than the United States could exist half slave and half free.

Yes, but it's hard to think through these things clearly.

Indeed it is. That's part of the game. The aggressor bloc is figuring on the free nations not being able to make up their minds. They think it always will be too little and too late as far as their victims are concerned. If they're right, the war ended when the British fled Dunkirk a year ago and everything since then has been only a cleanup.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, May 20

SPLENDID opportunities for advancing upon ambitious objectives should be indicated by this days astral influences. It may be a time for seeking power, growth, expansion of interests, credit and finances with the assurance of surprising support from those in prestige and authority. There may be various angles of the unexpected in this direction, with new projects under excellent prospect of cooperation and approbation. But be wary as to schemes, deception and intrigues of a dubious nature. Work for public or community advantage. Unlooked-for changes are imminent. Exercise prudence and thrift with funds.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of exceptional opportunities for reaching high goals of power, ambition and perhaps public or social recognition or preferment. Such may involve unforeseen changes, but in all ventures beware of fraud, subtlety, intrigues and other glamorous or seductive schemes or entanglements. Also be conservative with investments; avoid a lavish use of funds either in business or personal indulgences.

A child born on this day should have much originality, independence and broad ambitions, with a generous, kindly and cordial nature, perhaps easily duped or imposed upon.

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Those of my readers who have followed my column for any length of time are aware of my interest in multiple human births. I feel that in the case of twins we have a unique opportunity to study organisms biologically because in the case of similar (one-egg) twins, we have individuals starting out with exactly the same heredity and the same biological or life impetus. My records show, indeed, that in spite of varying environments, twins, over and over again, live the same length of time, even to within hours and minutes of each other, and often die of the same diseases.

I am very much interested, therefore, in the recent book by Dr. H. H. Newman, Professor of Zoology at the University of Chicago, on Multiple Human Births. (Doubleday, Doran & Company, Inc., 1940). Dr. Newman has frequently studied twins but this, so far as I know, is the first time that he has branched out into triplets, quadruplets and a study of the famous quint.

Frequency of Multiple Births
The frequency of multiple births follows a startling mathematical ratio. Triplets are as much scarcer than twins as twins are scarcer than singletons. In other words, a twin birth occurs for each of 86 single births, and one triplet birth occurs for each of 86 twin births, and one quadruplet birth occurs for each 86 triplet births. Stated otherwise, the ratio of twins to single births is 1 to 86; that of triplets to single births is 1 to 86; that of quadruplets to single births is 1 to 86. This astonishing ratio has been worked out accurately and is known as Hellin's Law.

Two out of 86, or 1 out of 44 babies born are twins, according to these figures. "Does this mean," asks Professor Newman, "that if you were to attend a football game viewed by 44,000 spectators, that 1,000 of them would be twins?" Well, perhaps not quite that, but we should expect about 600 twins in a crowd of that size.

In four California cities—Berkeley, Oakland, Richmond and Alameda—there was a total school enrollment of 75,013. Of these 1,051 were twins.

Sex Ratios

In multiple births, the zoologist tries to determine whether the individuals came from one egg, or two or three eggs. One-egg twins, triplets or quadruplets are always of the same sex (a brother and sister twin are never one-egg twins) and they are similar in many other respects.

Now, looking at the sex ratios of quadruplets there were 48 sets of quadruplets born in the United States from 1915 to 1930. There could be five, and only five, sex combinations in a quadruplet set: (1) 4 males, (2) 3 males and 1 female, (3) 2 males and 2 females, (4) 3 females and 1 male, and (5) 4 females. As a matter of fact, in the 48 sets, there were 13 all males and 10 all females, 12 two males and two females. This would indicate that nearly half were one-egg quadruplets and a fourth were two-egg quadruplets. Four sets of quintuplets have been born in the United States since 1776—one in 1776, one in 1800, one in 1890 (Maysfield, Ky.—all boys) and one in 1936 (Durham, N. C.—all girls).

Not as much study has been made of the psychology of triplets and quadruplets as of twins, but in the case of one-egg triplets or quadruplets, the similarity in personality, intellect, bodily build and

Questions and Answers

R. T. J.: "What will cause the heart to miss a beat, especially when sleeping on the left side or bending over?"

Answer—these are called extra systoles and are the commonest cause of irregularity of the heart or palpitation in these past middle life. They are probably not of any serious significance. The usual explanation is that they are due to irritability of the heart muscle either from the use of tobacco, alcohol, or some other cause. As a proof of this, they go away after a round of stiff exercise which tires the heart muscle.

CHAPTER THIRTY

A week of storms followed, making offshore fishing impossible. Heavy rains and hungry whales drove the ocean herring into sheltered, shallow waters. And though the herring had been driving like a madman ever since Kemp's return, the O'Moore catch grew ever smaller. Kemp came often to Echo House these days, so often that Polena, no longer bothering to announce his arrival, merely waved him toward the stairs and the Captain's sitting room. He was looking older and, Sondra thought, more harassed than seemed strictly justified by a mere fish shortage so early in the season.

Sondra felt sorry for him, but she was holding herself strictly to her self-made promise not to meddle again with the business of fish. And fishing, it seemed, was fish. The subject with which Kemp and anyone else had become suddenly engrossed. Often, long after he had gone to bed, she could hear him and her grandfather threshing out some knotty piscatorial problem.

On one such night, unable to sleep, she crossed the hall to the Lady Franklin suite to get a new novel from the guest bookcase. Polena was a crank about this suite, she thought, as she surveyed the room's exquisite order. The fresh counterpane on the bed was one of fine cream linen with a lily pattern quilted into it, the work of Sondra's great-grandmother.

Next morning when Sondra returned the book, she was faintly surprised to find the door of the suite wide open. Inside, she noticed a number of things slightly disarranged; but most arresting of all to a woman's eye was the counterpane. It's quilted lily pattern was now upside down.

Leaving everything untouched, Sondra ran down the hall to the dining room, where she knew the Captain would be. Glum at this hour, but her first glimpse of him through the open door drove all thought of the prowler from her mind. Alert, intent, he was facing the bay window, his arms and hands moving with the sharp sure quickness of a master directing a crew.

Sondra moved so softly to the window that the Captain was unaware of her presence. When she saw what it was that so gripped his attention, her on heart gave an ecstatic leap.

From forward and aft on the Glory's deck, two slender, tapering spars towered against the morning sky. Men swarmed about them, adjusting turn-buckles, tightening stays. Other men were massed in midships to receive a third gleaming spar, the mainmast. Already it was being swung out from the Bates wharf— and now Sondra recognized the "radio masts" which the Forest Man had left with Jean Reynall more than a month ago.

So, from the very first, Reynall had planned and worked to restore the Glory to her old estate.

He was directing the work now from a point of vantage beside the poop-deck skylight, on the edge of which sat Miss Jacqueline, watching and smoking.

The winch roared. The slender mast-tip swayed, trembled, swept upward in a majestic, breath-taking arc. Then suddenly the winch was silent. Men, at a dozen stations, were snatching hasty turns of stays and guy-ropes, while a rumbling roar rose from their triumphant ranks.

It was done. The Glory of the West was once more a mistress of the seas; a proud, three-masted shipper.

"The Glory—my Glory! Thanks to God, she's a ship again," Sondra turned at the sound of her grandfather's low, husky voice. He didn't know she was there. He was standing very straight and proud, gazing down at his first command with a smile of ineffable gladness. But his chin was quivering, and his lean, weathered face was wet with tears.

That morning, Polena came puffing up with a letter. "Bag of mail just came in by plane from Juneau," he pointed. "Postmaster sent this right over."

"Put it on the table," the Captain was frowning over his herring boards.

"Dynamite—look!" cried Sondra.

"It's special delivery. From Washington, D. C.—the Navy Department. It must be about your charts." The Captain snatched up the envelope and ripped it open. "Bless me, son! So it is, Sondra!"

Sondra read the letter over her grandfather's shoulder. "They do want your charts, lamb. And how!" The Captain let out a joyous oath, and the two, throwing their arms about each other, rocked back and forth, laughing.

"May I share in this family rejoicing?" It was Kemp, speaking from the open doorway. He was smiling, but only with his lips. His eyes held the harassed look that had become habitual with him of late.

The Captain, sparkling with triumph, waved the letter in welcome. "Uncle Sam has waked up to me charts at last, Starbuck," he roared. "Here's the proof—signed by the Secretary of the Navy himself. Listen, now, whilst I read you his very words:—

"Your letter relative to certain drawings and other data pertaining to some uncharted portions of the Aleutian Islands has recently been turned over to me by the War Department. This department wishes to express its grateful appreciation of your kind offer to submit these documents for the use of the United States Government."

"The U. S. S. New Orleans, now en route to Alaskan waters, should arrive off Sitka about August 15th; at which time Lieut. Wayne Shaw will call upon you and take personal charge of the documents in question. Lieut. Shaw will be very glad to receive from you at the same time any verbal information on Alaskan waters and conditions not covered by these papers."

"It is assumed that you are exercising the utmost care for the safeguarding of these documents, since it appears they may embody information of vital importance to any unfriendly power that might contemplate hostilities against our western seaboard."

"Assuring you of— and so forth."

"Well there it is Starbuck!" The Captain proudly thrust the letter at Kemp, glanced at the missive and handed it back. "August fifteenth—a week from today," he calculated solemnly. "That's quick work, sir. They must think your charts darned important. If Naval Intelligence is sending Sh—er—if this chap Shaw is coming up to take special charge of them," He shot a keen glance at the Captain's smiling face. "Better have Jarvis set a special guard at the bank, sir. Someone might try blowing the vault to get at them."

"Let 'em blow and be darned," the Captain chuckled. "They'll find nothing of mine in Tom's vault." "Dynamite won't tell even me where he's hidden the charts, Kemp." Sondra was starting for the door. "But I'll bully him into showing them to us before the New Orleans arrives. Ta, ta, gentlemen!"

When the two men were alone, O'Moore turned an appraising eye on Kemp, who was nervously drawing out his cigarette case. "Sit down, lad," he said. "Get it off your chest."

Kemp fumbled a light to his cigarette and inhaled deeply before he spoke. "It's that Japanese Army contract, sir. I've just had another letter. They're crowding me hard for more speed. More fish."

"Tell the yellow heathens to be airy. We'll more than make up any temporary shortage in a week or two."

"But my contract demands regular shipments, on scheduled dates; and there's a murderous penalty clause for failure. Your fleet brought in barely enough to cover my floor this morning."

"Aye. With devil a herring offshore, my lads are findin' tough pickin's," admitted the Captain. "But what's wrong with your own fleet, that was built for this push-in-the-corner fishin'? I don't see them fetchin' in many loads, either."

Kemp flushed apologetically. "I'm afraid my Japanese aren't much good against native competition, sir. Any time they manage to run down a school of herring, they're sure to find some of Reynall's Si-wah boats in there ahead of them."

"Reynall, eh? Chris told me he'd let most of his boats go free-lancin' up the inlets, keepin' only a dozen at Shaman's Lagoon to look after the school he holds impounded there."

"That's another thing I must talk over with you, Captain Reynall has offered to sell me his surplus."

"Surplus!" O'Moore's white eyebrows bushed upward. "He has a surplus, then?"

"So he says. And he's offered to let me have them at the same price I pay you."

"You accepted?"

"I told him I'd have to see you first, sir. I know you're at war with Reynall, but—I have to fill cans for those troops in China!"

"So-o." The Captain's voice was dangerously soft. "Have ye forgotten, Starbuck, that clause in your contract with me which forbids your havin' any traffic with Reynall?"

"It forbids my selling fish to Reynall, and not buying from him." Kemp's haggard eyes met the other's stare unflinchingly. Silence, like a river filled with strong conflicting currents, flowed between them for a space.

"That's true," the Captain said at last. "And I cannot blame ye, lad, for takin' fish where ye find 'em, when ye need them. But—will ye turn down Reynall's offer, if I show ye where ye'll not lose by it? How ye may profit, in the end?"

"How, sir?"

"Our boats may strike herring any day now, endin' your worries. Should they not, I'll insure you against loss by payin' your penalty out of me own pocket. Is that fair?" asked the Captain.

"Most generous, sir," Kemp shook his head regretfully. "But what's really important is that I get the fish to make those shipments." "What if ye got them, already canned, for less than they'd cost ye to pack?"

"How do you mean, sir?" Kemp stared blankly into the Captain's shrewdly twinkling eyes.

"Look down there, me lad," O'Moore pointed to the Bates wharf, where Reynall's men were stacking cases of canned herring under a makeshift shed. "Reynall has shipped no fish, as yet. He's filled the Glory's hold with what he's canned already, and now he has no place to store his future pack. Even if he had, he couldn't store it, for soon he must raise cash to meet his pay roll. To get cash, he must sell; and to sell, he must ship; and 'tis meeself has some small voice in Alaska shippin'. There'll be no space for Reynall cargo in any vessel makin' this port—ye may lay to that. There are other lines out of Juneau, of course, but I'll be goin' over there shortly on other business, and—hm-m-m—I'll attend to that, too, ye understand."

"That might force Reynall to sell me a part of his pack at cost, or a bit below," Kemp agreed, thoughtfully. "Buy I can't see how it helps you much, Captain. He still has all his early pack in the Glory's hold, and the ship rigged ready to sail. You can't stop him taking that cargo South and selling it at a nice profit. So you still will not have won your fight."

"Har-rumph!" The Captain cleared his throat noisily. "I'll have shown the unregenerate whelp he can't kick Dan O'Moore in the ribs, and not be takin' a clout or two in return. Belike, as things look now, I may have been a bit hasty in me past judgment; but I can't be tossin' up the sponge now, whilst the young devil has me covered with blood entirely. 'Tis a draw with him I'm after, no more!"

When Kemp did not speak, the Captain leaned forward earnestly. "In any case, you won, me lad. By refusin' to deal with Reynall now, ye get his surplus later—packed, ready to ship, and at your own price, isn't that clear?"

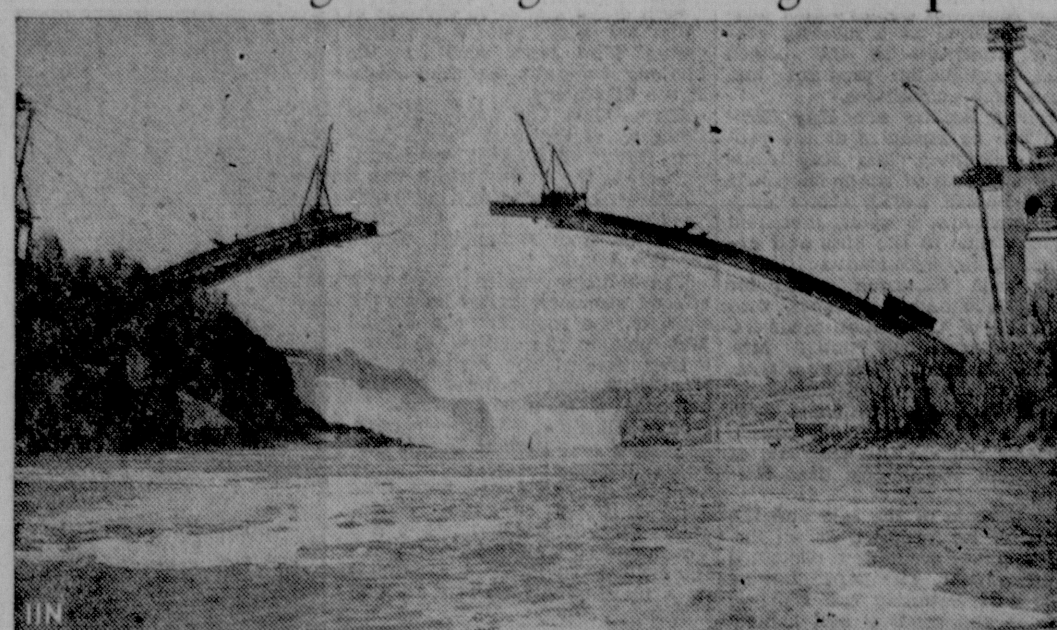

"The joker there lies in the time element, Captain. I need fish at once—not a month or two months hence. My plant should be turning full blast right now. And—well—Reynall can keep it going for weeks, just with that lot he has bottled up in Shaman's Lagoon." After a moment, he added. "Sorry, sir," and shot a narrow-eyed glance at the silent O'Moore.

Committees Named For Junior Auxiliary

Frances Seidler and Kay Holbach will be members of the program committee, and Kay Holbach, chairman of the membership.

Miss Russell Burns, senior auxiliary president, a guest, presented auxiliary pins to the girls and explained their significance.

The girls discussed plans for making blue and gold capes, with assistance of the senior members. Girls are asked to notify Mrs. Charles Kennedy, junior advisor, of measurements for the capes.

Junior auxiliary members will march in the Memorial day parade here and will aid in the sale of poppies on Poppy day next Saturday.

The purpose of the sale and the history of its inception as an annual auxiliary event were explained by the advisor. The paper flowers to be sold Saturday are replicas, made at the soldiers' and sailors' home at Sandusky by disabled World war veterans, of the wild European poppies which bloomed on the battlefield and in the cemeteries of the first World war.

Sold by volunteer workers, the flowers provide funds for the auxiliary's welfare work, aiding in the care of veterans and their families.

The girls are making scrapbooks and donating dolls to be sent to the Veterans' Children's home in Xenia.

The next meeting will be a picnic June 21 at the Salem Country club. Members who attend are asked to meet at the Legion home to go to the club.

"The Great American Broadcast," a story based on the beginnings and development of radio, brings Jack Oakie, Alice Faye and John Payne together again. The three were featured previously in "Tin Pan Alley".

The story brings together, when radio was in its infancy, a cabaret songstress, a young war ace and a radio experimenter. The war ace is the "brain man" of the outfit and the radio "ham" is only the guy whose radio "toy" they think will be a big thing. A socially prominent millionaire interested in the girl singer puts up the money for the first broadcast which is a flop. The singer and the flyer are married and the inventor joins forces with the millionaire.

When the young couple go broke they separate and she goes on alone to become one of the featured radio singers. A trick of the millionaire and the inventor brings the two together again.

The supporting cast includes

Cesar Romero, Mary Beth Hughes, and James Newell, with specialty numbers by The Four Ink Spots, the Wiere Brothers and the Nicholas Brothers, Eula Morgan, William Pawley and Lucien Littlefield.

CARBURETOR MAY MEAN GAS WASTE

Sohio Station Here Makes Adjustments To Save Operating Cos.

The carburetor on your automobile, regardless of the make of the car, is a device having several important duties to perform all of which must be performed efficiently.

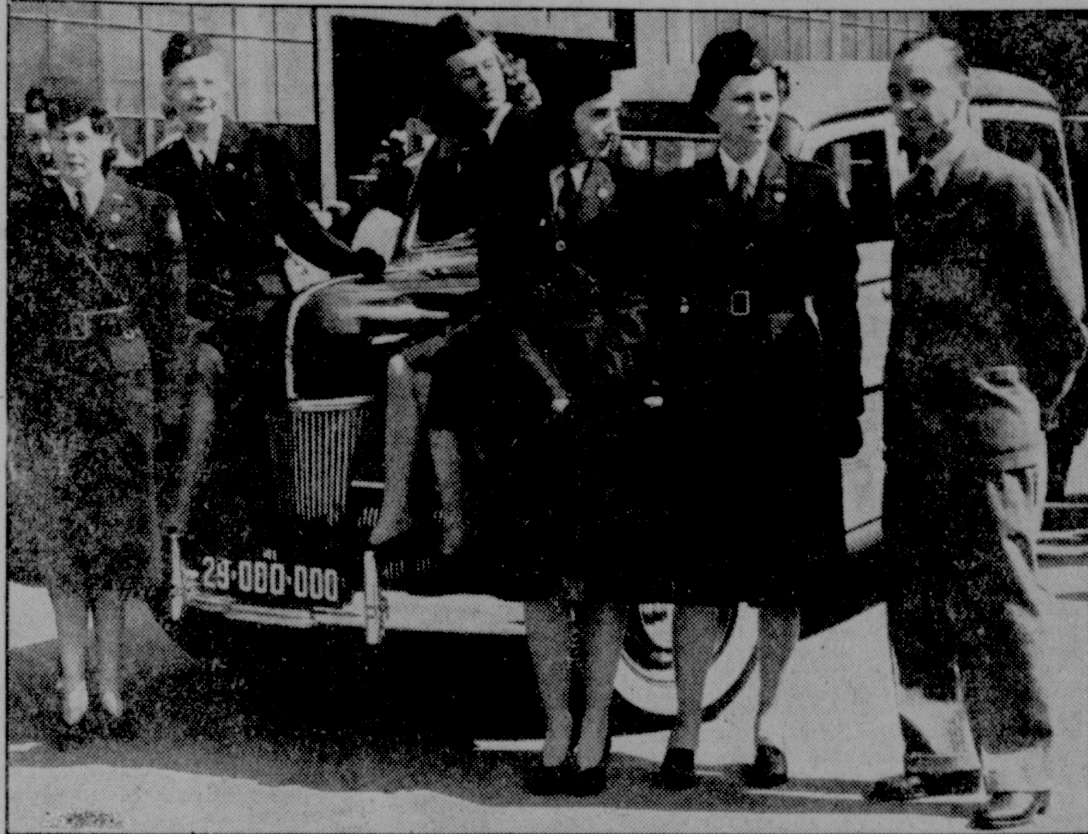

It must measure very accurately the proportions of air and fuel required to meet the varying speed and load conditions; produce a mixture of the correct air and fuel ratio, so that the mixture will burn efficiently in the engine, and thoroughly atomize the fuel leaving the nozzle, distributing it evenly throughout the air stream delivered to the intake manifold.

To have your carburetor checked and kept in proper adjustment is no simple job. The compression and ignition play a very important part in this service but when these things are adjusted to work together, so to speak, it does result in a motor that purrs under any driving condition and at the same time saves the motorist motor fuel every mile the car is driven.

Not many cars on the highways are properly adjusted and often it is because the owner is not fully informed as to the proper methods necessary to get the maximum efficiency.

M. A. Kelly at the Kelly Sohio service station at S. Lincoln ave. and E. Pershing st. has all necessary equipment and the knowledge to do this work and insists he can nearly always make adjustments that will save the motorist in fuel burned over a short time more than his service will cost.

Music Has Important Place In Plans For Child's Future

Don Dusenberry, supervisor and instructor of all string instruments for the Finley Music Co. in their school of music, states that planning for the future of a child is a problem for parents today.

Parents should focus their children's interest on some musical instrument while they are young. Eight years of age is the proper time to start on a band instrument, while piano, violin and guitar can be started at a still younger age.

When childhood days are over the opportunity to receive a musical education is, in most cases, gone forever. How many times have you heard it said: "Oh, if I could only play some musical instrument!"?

Few things will pay better dividends in happiness and add to future success, than musical training.

Many Successful Students

Finley School of Music, established in 1924, has gained a wide reputation for its successful students. They offer their musical advancement plan—play as you pay—at a cost that is trifling. This plan also helps to determine as to whether or not children have musical talent.

Many parents hesitate to purchase musical instruments because they lack confidence in their child's musical ability. The Finley Music Co. will furnish any instrument you desire, whether it be violin, Spanish or Hawaiian guitar, mandolin, trumpet, clarinet, cornet, trombone, piano-accorion and drums with a course of private lessons at a small cost of $1.25 per week, which includes the instrument. Similar arrangements can be made for saxophone, piano, flute, French horn or piccolo.

Never before have parents had such a real opportunity offered. This gives children every possible advantage for a real musical education at a very small cost.

Call at the Finley Music Co. tomorrow and talk over this musical advancement plan. Now is the ideal time to start. As vacation time gives the boy or girl carefree time to devote to the study of some musical instrument and when school reopens in the fall they have a good start.

Many students are in a position to enter the school orchestra or band by the opening of the fall school term.

So don't delay to register your boy or girl on some musical instrument today. Vacation time is music time at the Finley School of Music.

NOW IS TIME FOR PLANTING SHRUBS

Cope Bros. & Fultz Advise Transplanting Be Done Early

To put off your landscaping is simply inviting extra work. Right now is the time to call at Cope Bros. and Fultz on Depot road and pick out the evergreens and other shrubbery you wish and set them out so they will get advantage of the late spring rains and as much cool weather as possible.

Most any shrub or evergreen can be transplanted at any time of year but it does require much more attention. If it's done much later you will have to plan on watering it nearly every day.

Mr. Cope advises early spring planting and then attention later in the year so they never get a chance to want for moisture. Cultivating around any tree or shrub is of great importance. Keep everlastingly at it and you will grow beautiful specimen trees.

Cope Bros. and Fultz are fortunate that they do have most any evergreen you may have in mind. Many nurseries did not set out seedlings or other small plants a few years back and are now finding it almost impossible to supply the demand. Even at Cope's, with their large acreage, some varieties are becoming scarce.

Art's Stressing Graduates' Gifts

Graduation is an outstanding event for students, their parents, and their friends. It represents the culmination of months and years of hard work and that final diploma is significant of the triumph.

As such, graduation should be marked with something a little out of the ordinary, and Art, the Jeweler, has made it possible for every parent, or friend, to do this.

In no year past has the variety of graduation gifts been so marked as it has at Art's this year.

GOOD SPORTSMAN HELPS OTHER MAN

Courtesy of the Ford Good Drivers League

A good driver has to be a good sport. When he notices another car trying to pass him in traffic, he lessens his speed and lets the other fellow in. Why not let him pass? It's evident he is driving faster than you care to. But that's his business, not yours. Safety requires that you give a little.

If the light turns green, you theoretically have the right of way, but don't take it for granted. Maybe that fellow coming up the street has poor brakes. Maybe his eyesight is bad. In any event, make sure he's going to stop.

If a pedestrian decides to cross the street in the flow of traffic, the driver must know how to handle the emergency. To a skilled driver, only one person has the "right of way" and that is the "other fellow." Be a good sportsman.

It would be difficult to find anything either more beautiful or more useful than a watch for the graduate. In the event he or she does not have one, Art carries a number of lines of fine watches, in both men's and women's styles and, of course, every one is of the latest design.

There are other jewelry items in countless numbers. There are small electric clocks, bedroom and auto radios, cameras, shaving equipment, pen and pencil sets—everything, in fact, that would please the young man or young woman.

Graduation days are nearly here and it would not be amiss to prepare for them now. Consult with Art, inspect the big gift stock and make a choice.

You'll find that it's easy to buy from Art on the budget payment plan. You'll be able this way to have the gift you want to give.

Expert drivers of all kinds of vehicles now being used in Red Cross work, these young ladies are taking an extensive course in motor vehicle mechanics. "LOOK TO FUTURE," TIP TO BUILDERS

Forethought May Prevent Costly Repair Work Later On

Hidden away between floors and partitions is a part of any building which construction men point out that, despite the fact that it's rarely seen, is nevertheless, one of the most important parts of the entire structure.

Plumbing, contracts will explain, must be right when it is installed. Otherwise, expensive alterations, repairs or adjustments may be essential later on.

Government agencies associated with home building are careful to emphasize that plumbing in any dwelling, no matter how large or small, must be right before the building is acceptable according to the best standards of construction.

They look to the future, not merely the present, when they emphasize the necessity of faultless plumbing because plumbing repairs are generally so expensive.

J. R. Stratton, a master plumber here for many years, will be glad to discuss plumbing details with prospective builders. While the fundamental theories of plumbing installation remain the same; that is, regarding construction, there are many improvements with respect to installation and equipment with which everyone should be familiar.

Equipment itself also has changed for the better. The modern bathroom is one of the most beautiful and colorful rooms of the home nowadays because beauty, as well as utility, has been given to fixtures.

If your contemplating building or remodeling, it will pay you to talk with Mr. Stratton.

Studying Ambulance Engine

PARIS FUR VAULT MEETS STANDARDS

Storage Conditions Provide All Requirements Of Protection

L. C. Price, proprietor of the Paris Cleaners on Benton road, where Ohio's most modern fur storage vault has been built, states that anyone with furs to store should know where the garments they prize so much are stored.

He states that many so-called vaults are nothing more than a room partitioned off in a basement or attic space of some store or an outbuilding of very questionable construction and yet referred to as storage vaults. Sure, such rooms can be fumigated to protect from moths; in fact some even spray the garments and seal them in paper bags but any such method would be far from safe for the furs and, unless the temperature and humidity can be controlled, actually harmful to the furs.

No manufacturer or high class furrier would even consider such methods. A fur storage vault that really protects the garment has to be of concrete or some masonry construction such as the 18-inch walls that make up the new vault at the Paris Cleaners, with equipment that maintains a tempera-

Retarded Brooklyn Dodgers Fail To Win Against Chicago

DUROCHER SHIFTS BROOKLYN LINEUP AS LEAD NARROWS

Losses To Pittsburgh And Chicago Nibble Away At Standing

(By Associated Press)
Leo Durocher and his Brooklyn Dodgers are discovering this isn't going to be the kind of National League race where you can take anything for granted.
The Brooks, who never do things in less than bunches, looked fine while reeling off that winning streak of seven straight which hoisted them into first place. Then came an 11-inning defeat in Pittsburgh, and Durocher decided it was a good time to break up his combination.

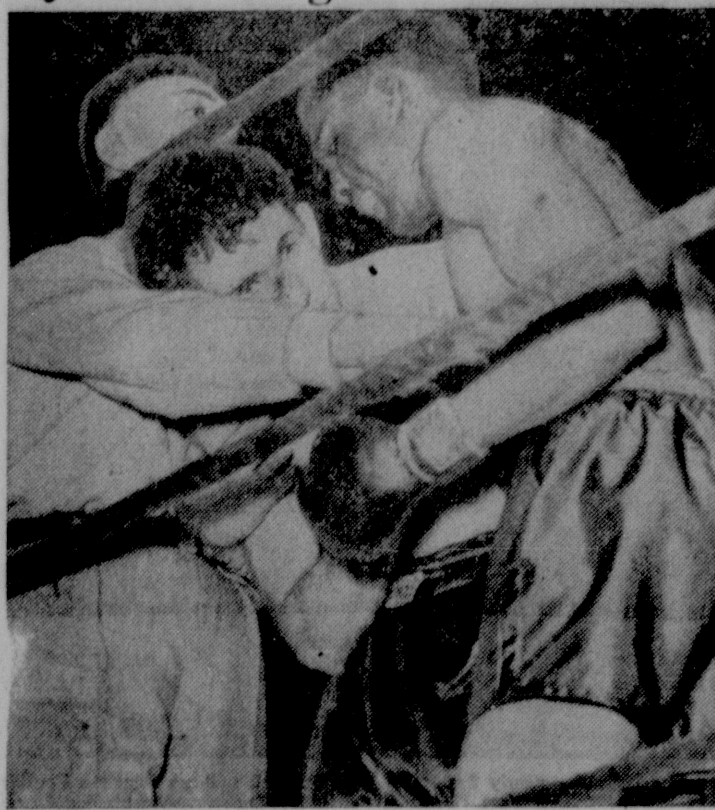

Lose, Anyway
In Chicago yesterday he stuck Pete Reiser back in the lineup in place of Jimmy Waddell, who had been leading the club with a .370 average; benched Dixie Walker in favor of right-handed hitting Joe Vosmik; and—the Dodgers blew a 7-4 decision to the Cubs. With the St. Louis Cardinals meanwhile shading the Phillies, 6-5, that left Brooklyn only a game in front of the Redbirds.

The Cards had to pay a goodly price for the triumph though, for catcher Walker Cooper was shelved for probably six weeks when he dislocated his shoulder in a collision at the plate.

Back in third place the New York Giants ran their winning streak to four straight by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-4, the Terrymen getting three in the seventh to win after the Bucs had made the most of six bases on balls to get all their runs in the first two frames.
Meanwhile Paul Derringer, getting his third win of the year, hauled the Cincinnati Reds out of their longest losing streak in more than 300 games. Two handy singles by Rookie Chuck Aleno dovetailed with Derringer's seventh-inning, nine-strikeout pitching for a 4-3 defeat of the Boston Braves after six losses.

pitchers for 16 hits and a 10-3 verdict.

The second-place Chicago White Sox and the New York Yankees got 16 safeties apiece. The Sox, headed by Taft Wright, got four runs in the first and five in the last three innings to rout the Washington Senators, 10-5. All of the Yankees hit safely. Joe Gordon clouted a three-run homer, to back up Lefty Gomez' six-hit pitching for a 12-2 thumping of the St. Louis Browns. Even Gomez got two hits.

The Detroit Tigers, who seem to be recovering from Hank Greenberg's departure, won their fourth in a row, though they had to go 11 innings to do it. Two unearned runs were the margin of a 6-5 triumph over the Boston Red Sox, who got one home when Jimmy Fox clouted a homer in the last of the 11th but couldn't get to relief, Pitcher Al Benton for any more.

AKRON EAST EDGES OUT AKRON NORTH IN DISTRICT MEET

Elliott Hansell and Tom Rhodes Qualify For State Meet

Nosing out Akron North by two points, Akron East Saturday afternoon won the Northeastern Ohio district track and field meet at Reilly stadium. Placing in eight of the 14 events and capturing three, firsts, East's was a well earned victory. Salem finished 15th with 6 points.

Ravenna Runner Stars
Individual star of the meet was Lee Havre, Ravenna dash man, whose wins to the 100 and 220 gave him a 12 point total. Scally of East Palestine, pre-meet threat, failed to live up to his impressive press notices when he tied for third in the high jump, turned in a fourth in the broad jump, and failed to place in the pole vault. Scally was defending state champion in both the high jump and pole vault.

The failure of Elliott Hansell to qualify in the 100-yd dash proved a big blow to the Salem squad. The local sprinter was disqualified as a result of two false starts in the prelims. Both he and Tom Rhodes will go to the state meet at Columbus, however; Hansell as a result of a third in the 220 and Rhodes because he was in the midst of a five-way tie for second in the pole vault. The Columbus meet will be held next weekend.

Individuals taking first, second, or third in any event automatically qualify for the finals.

LONG, SALEM CLUB PRO, WILL COMPETE IN MAHONING OPEN

$5,000 Event To Attract Leading National Links Stars

Salem will have a representative in the $5,000 Mahoning Open Golf tournament June 13-14-15 at the Mahoning Country club. The Salem standard bearer is Frankie Long, new pro at the Salem Golf club.

Long has been tuning up in 1.9 style this year. He recently toured the rough Mill Creek and Mahoning layouts in par figures. A skilled putter, Long figures to score low on Mahoning's sharp greens.

Others from the Salem Alliance-Canton district include Babe Wagner and Lloyd Gulickson. Last year Gulickson had a 70 on the first 18 for a place among the leaders but he ran into all sorts of difficulty on the final cut, winding up with 147—10 strokes behind Ray Mangrum's pace.

Jack Miskell, former tutor at Salem but now at the Poland Country club, is entered. Miskell has scored low and high at Mahoning but believes he will be hitting the low 70's at tournament time.

The nation's top performers are entered. Ben Hogan, leading money winners, will be seeking the $12,000 first prize and some 30 points to add to his quest of his second Harry Vardon trophy. He leads the Vardon trophy award now with 250 points, 37 in front of "Slammin' Sam" Snead.

Both will be battling for honors here along with "Jug" McSpaden, who showed the way in the Massachusetts Invitational a few days ago. Lloyd Mangrum, P. G. A. Champion, Byron Nelson, Ralph Guldahl, Dick Metz, Jimmy Thompson, Horton Smith, Tony Penna, Felix Scharif, Sam Byrd, Vic Ghezzi, National Open Champion Lawson Little, Willie Goggin, Jimmy Demaret, Clayton Haefer, Harry Cooper, Denny Shute, Jimmy Kunes, Sam Parks, Ted Luther, and a host of other links aces.

NEW YORK, May 19.—(The Special News Service)—Dizzy Dean is lost in his new role as coach of the Cubs. He cornered Cholly Grimm and asked, "am I supposed to laugh at all of Wilson's jokes?"

A plastic operation will be required to repair the damage to Lew Jenkins' map inflicted by Dr. Bob Montgomery, the eminent eye, ear and nose specialist from Philadelphia. Golf tip: no dark horse will win the Goodall round robin tournament simply because there aren't any in it. Tonight's fight winners: Petey Scalzo over Phil Swick at Milwaukee; Turkey Thompson over Tony Musto at Los Angeles, and Sammy Angott over Lenny Mancini at Cleveland.

this country, when he stated: "I count this a great privilege to be here on this great Americanization day. For 40 years I have been a citizen and I cannot find words to express my appreciation for this country with its liberties and freedom of thought and worship." He declared that "the institutions of this great country must be kept as they are, and to preserve this liberty we must all work together and get back to God. If anyone is not satisfied with the Constitution and institutions of this country, let them go back where they came from and let us alone."

Others who spoke along similar lines were: William Berrisford of East Liverpool, Leo Capacio of Salem, James Altomare of Leontonia, Stephanie Novak of West Point and Sophia Dallas of East Liverpool.

Oscar Berman, naturalization examiner of the department of justice, spoke briefly, and expressed appreciation of the fine observance welcoming the new citizens.

A special feature of the afternoon was an eloquent appeal to all Americans in an oration "Unity the Safeguard of Democracy," delivered by George Hargraves, Jr., East Liverpool high school student.

Present Legion Pans

The presentation of the handsome pin awards in the county-wide American Legion essay contests was made from the judges' stand, with Glenn Powell, chairman of the essay contest presenting awards to eight young people, a boy and a girl from each of the four high school classes. Recipients of this honor were: Ruth Bauman, Leontonia; Anna May Shirley, Mary Winters and Elinor Eccles, East Liverpool; Robert Tefft, Wellsville; David After and Tayson Miller of Lisbon, and Robert Bloor of East Liverpool. The subject on which the essays were written, was "Lincoln and the Constitution."

An impressive flag ceremony was carried out as a part of the afternoon's program in which flags of the various nations, carried by Boy Scouts from various parts of the grounds merged and as their respective flags were wound on the staff, "Old Glory" was unfurled to the audience. As it billowed gently in the breeze the bands softly played "The Star Spangled Banner." Adding a touch of glory and might at this point, three monophones droned overhead, flown by Paul Dietz, George S. Huff, Herman Woomer and John Ebaugh, dipping their wings in salute as they flew over the grounds.

Representative John P. Stephenson, in the address of the day, spoke on "The American Dream," U. S. standards, large 2 1/2; U. S. extras and standards medium white 2 1/2; U. S. standards, medium white 2 1/2.

He paid tribute to those American principles and ideals in stating "It is altogether fitting that we gather here on this occasion in order that we might recapture some of that fine heritage of this great country, and be truly appreciative that we are Americans."

The benediction by Adj. Carl Barton of the Salvation Army, retiring of the Colors and a selection, "America," by the massed bands completed the program.
